Neonatal care refers to the specialized care given to premature or sick babies in a neonatal unit, usually within a hospital. Over 90,000 babies require neonatal care each year due to premature birth or illness. The neonatal team provides emotional support and information to parents about their baby's condition and treatment. Babies born before 37 weeks are considered premature, and the neonatal team may use terms like "preterm" to describe early birth. The workshop on Competency-Based Neonatal Care was held on March 7, 2024, and covered topics such as premature birth, neonatal care, and skills training The speakers and facilitators included Dr. Jyoti Naikare, Mrs. Suhasini Sanas, Ms. Nikita Wagh, and other faculty members from the Department of Child Health Nursing.
